INSIGHTS • OCTOBER 2026

Higher Interest Rates: What Equity Investors Should Know

Healthy economic growth, strong corporate earnings, and expanding global investment opportunities could continue to support the case for active equity investing.

Matthew DeCicco, CFA®
Partner, Director of Equities

Matthias Knerr, CFA®
Partner, Portfolio Manager

Ryan Howard, CFA®
Partner, Portfolio Manager

KEY TAKEAWAYS

- Strong corporate earnings and economic growth have helped support equity markets despite higher interest rates.
- Rising rates have not historically prevented positive equity returns. Over the past 50 years, the S&P 500® Index has generated positive average 12-month forward returns across different interest-rate environments, including periods of sharp increases in Treasury yields.
- The impact of higher rates varies by sector and business model. While rate-sensitive industries can face pressure, other businesses may benefit from higher rates or increased volatility. Understanding those differences can help to create opportunities for active equity managers.
- Structural growth trends continue to expand the global equity opportunity. Artificial intelligence (AI), electrification, defense spending, and energy infrastructure are supporting investment across industries and geographies, offering opportunities beyond the largest U.S. technology companies.
- An active, bottom-up approach that seeks companies with pricing power, scale, and network advantages may help investors build portfolios better positioned to sustain earnings growth across changing market environments.

Rising Rates Have Not Historically Prevented Positive Equity Returns

While higher interest rates can create volatility, their impact on equity performance has historically been less straightforward than investors might expect.

An analysis of nearly 50 years of market data shows that the S&P 500 Index generated positive average 12-month forward returns across every category of changes in the 10-year Treasury yield, including periods when rates increased sharply (see Figure 1). When the 10-year Treasury yield rose between 50 and 75 basis points over six months, the S&P 500 subsequently generated an average 12-month return of 11%, with positive returns in 87% of observations. Even when Treasury yields increased by more than 75 basis points, the index delivered an average forward return of 9.6%, with positive returns in 74% of observations.

Figure 1. Equity Markets Have Historically Experienced Positive Returns Across Rate Environments

Changes in the 10-year U.S. Treasury Yield versus the S&P 500 average forward return and the percentage of periods with positive returns, January 1, 1976-September 30, 2026

PRIOR 6M CHANGE IN 10 YEAR TREASURY YIELD	S&P 500 INDEX
	FREQUENCY OF OCCURRENCES	FORWARD 1M	% POSITIVE	FORWARD 3M	% POSITIVE	FORWARD 6M	% POSITIVE	FORWARD 12M	% POSITIVE
Yield Decline	51.9%	+0.9% / 62%		+3.1% / 71%		+5.9% / 73%		+10.5% / 78%
0 to +25 bps	13.3%	+1.8% / 74%		+2.3% / 61%		+5.1% / 75%		+9.6% / 76%
+25 to +50 bps	10.7%	-0.2% / 54%		+0.9% / 69%		+2.9% / 67%		+9.7% / 82%
+50 to +75 bps	8.7%	+0.6% / 64%		+2.6% / 68%		+6.6% / 79%		+11.0% / 87%
+75 bps or more	15.6%	+0.6% / 56%		+1.1% / 61%		+2.1% / 63%		+9.6% / 74%

Source: Bloomberg and Lord Abbett. Data as of September 30, 2026. For illustrative purposes only and does not represent any specific portfolio managed by Lord Abbett or any particular investment. Past performance is not a reliable indicator or guarantee of future results. Indexes are unmanaged, do not reflect the deduction of fees or expenses, and are not available for direct investment.

These results do not suggest that interest rates are unimportant. Rather, they suggest that changes in rates alone have not consistently determined equity market performance. Earnings growth, valuations, and the underlying economic environment also influence returns.

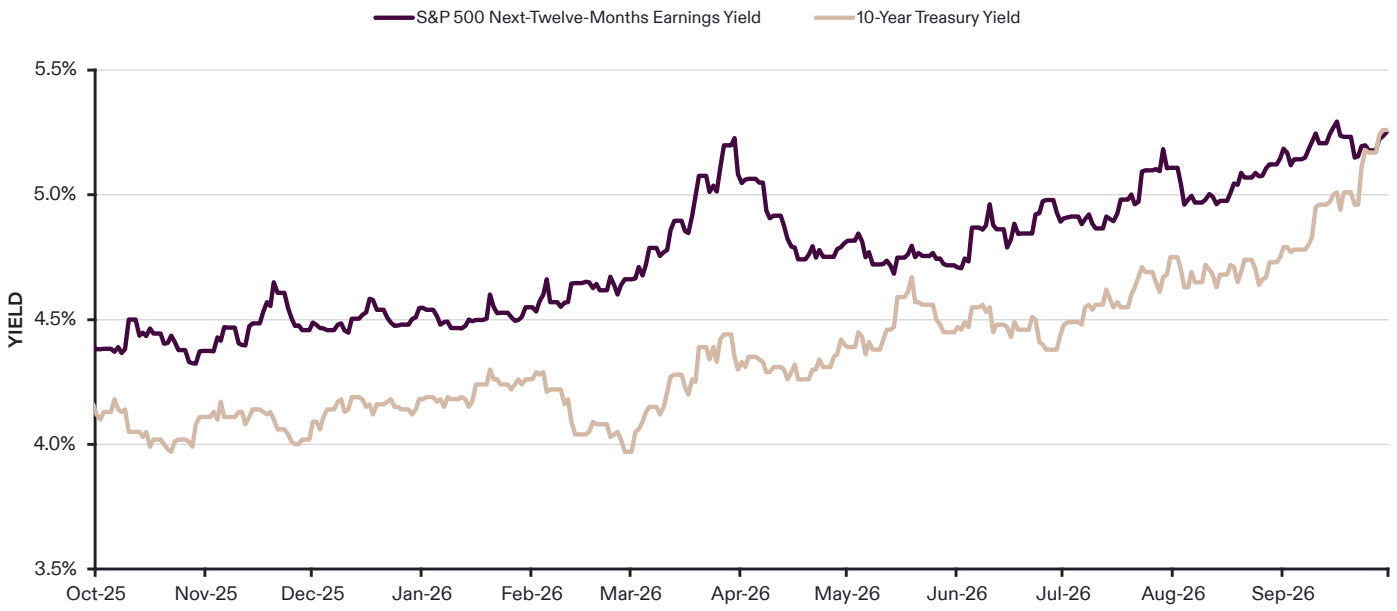

Higher Rates, Stronger Earnings, Lower Multiples

While interest rates have risen, resilient economic activity and healthy business fundamentals have supported corporate earnings growth. Treasury yields reflect a combination of economic growth, inflation expectations, and other factors, but for equity investors, what matters most is what drives changes in interest rates and how those changes affect corporate earnings.

In the U.S., nominal GDP growth has exceeded 6%, according to the U.S. Bureau of Economic Analysis as of June 30, 2026. This could continue to provide a favorable backdrop for corporate profit growth. Despite concerns about elevated equity valuations a year ago, the S&P 500 Index subsequently gained over 15.7% on a total return basis, according to Bloomberg, for the 12 months ended September 30, 2026. That performance has been accompanied by a decline in the market's price-to-earnings (P/E) multiple, according to FactSet as of September 30, 2026, as earnings growth has outpaced share-price appreciation. The S&P 500 earnings yield also increased from approximately 4.4% to 5.3%, while the 10-year Treasury yield rose from 4.2% to 5.3% (see Figure 2). The increase in earnings yield reflects lower valuation multiples, even as corporate profits have continued to grow.

Figure 2. Earnings Growth Has Held Up Despite Higher Rates, Making Equity Valuations More Attractive

S&P 500 Index earnings yield and U.S. 10-year Treasury yield, October 31, 2025-September 30, 2026

METRIC	SEPTEMBER 2025	SEPTEMBER 2026	CHANGE	WHAT IT MEANS
10-Year Treasury Yield	4.15%	5.27%	+ 112 bps	Higher interest rates
S&P 500 Earnings Yield	4.39%	5.27%	+ 88 bps	Higher equity income potential
S&P 500 Forward P/E (NTM)	22.8x	18.9x	-17%	Lower equity valuations

Source: FactSet and Federal Reserve Bank of St. Louis. Data as of September 30, 2026. Earnings yield is a measure of a company's or stock index's earnings relative to its market price, expressed as a percentage. It is calculated by dividing earnings per share by the stock price and is the inverse of the price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio. A higher earnings yield generally indicates a lower valuation relative to earnings. For illustrative purposes only and does not represent any specific portfolio managed by Lord Abbett or any particular investment. Past performance is not a reliable indicator or guarantee of future results. Indexes are unmanaged, do not reflect the deduction of fees or expenses, and are not available for direct investment.

A similar dynamic has unfolded internationally. Interest rates have risen from historically low levels in Europe and Japan, reflecting both inflation and more resilient economic growth. Yet international equities have continued to perform well, with the MSCI World Index gaining approximately 15.7% over the preceding 12 months ended September 30, 2026, on a net return basis, according to Bloomberg.

The important distinction is that higher rates do not necessarily signal deteriorating conditions for equities. When rates rise alongside healthy economic and earnings growth, corporate fundamentals can help offset pressure on valuations.

Interest Rate Volatility Helps to Create Different Outcomes Across Businesses

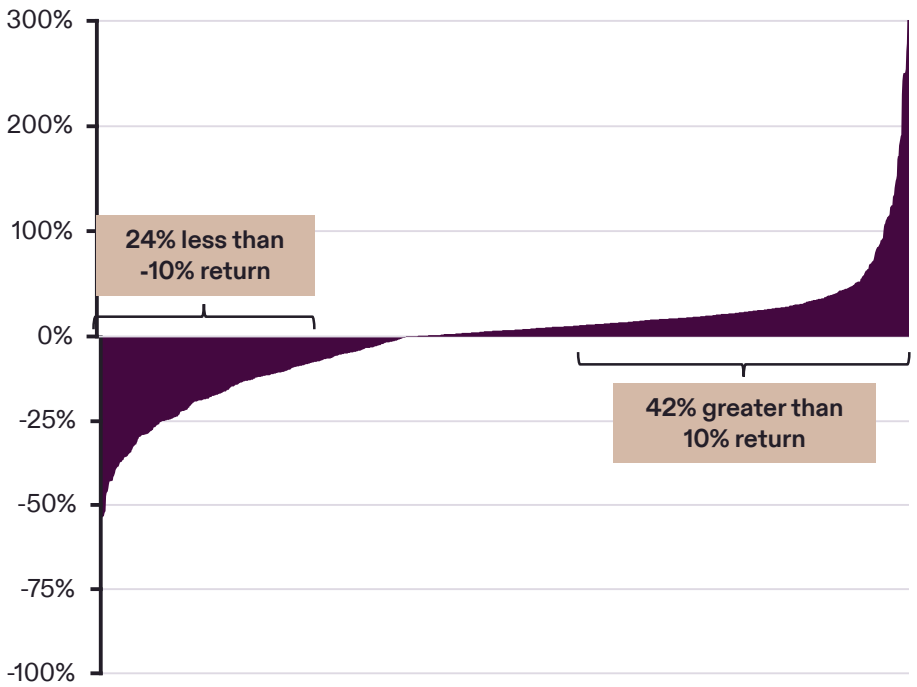

The effect of higher interest rates is not uniform across the equity market. Some industries face pressure from higher financing costs, while others benefit from changes in rates or increased market activity. Rate-sensitive sectors such as real estate investment trusts (REITs) and utilities can face challenges because of their capital requirements and sensitivity to financing costs. Conversely, banks as a sector may benefit from higher interest rates, particularly through improved lending margins. This may be especially relevant in markets such as Europe and Japan, where interest rates are normalizing after prolonged periods of exceptionally low or negative rates.

Interest-rate volatility can also affect businesses differently within the same sector. Financial exchanges, for example, may benefit from greater demand for hedging and risk-management products, while credit-rating agencies can face headwinds when volatile rates discourage debt issuance. These differences reinforce the importance of evaluating individual business models rather than making broad investment decisions based on interest-rate forecasts across markets.

The wide dispersion in individual stock returns in 2026 also reinforces the case for active security selection. As of September 30, 2026, 42% of securities in the MSCI World Index had generated year-to-date returns greater than 10%, while 24% had declined by more than 10% (see Figure 3). This significant gap in performance highlights the opportunities for active managers to distinguish companies with strong fundamentals from those facing greater challenges, including higher interest rates.

Figure 3. Dispersion Favors an Active Approach to Equities

MSCI World Index year-to-date security level returns, January 1, 2026-September 30, 2026

Source: FactSet. Data as of September 30, 2026. Past performance is not a reliable indicator or guarantee of future results. Indexes are unmanaged, do not reflect the deduction of fees or expenses, and are not available for direct investment.

A Companies, Not Countries Approach

The wide dispersion in stock returns reinforces the importance of active, bottom-up security selection, in our view. Seeking companies with sustainable competitive advantages can help distinguish businesses positioned to sustain earnings growth from those more vulnerable to higher costs and competitive pressures.

We believe three broad sources of competitive advantage are particularly relevant:

- Consumer advantage: Companies with differentiated products, strong brands, or customer relationships that support pricing power.
- Producer advantage: Businesses with scale, specialized processes, or operating efficiencies that competitors may find difficult to replicate.
- Network advantage: Companies whose products or services become more valuable as their networks of customers, users, or participants expand.

These business strengths can help companies sustain attractive returns on capital, reinvest in their businesses, and maintain earnings growth even as economic conditions change.

Structural Growth Trends Help to Broaden Equity Opportunities

Several long-term investment trends continue to help support corporate earnings growth across global markets. AI remains a significant driver of capital spending and innovation. While much of the infrastructure investment is currently concentrated in the U.S., companies around the world may participate in the supply chain, including semiconductor equipment manufacturers and other technology providers.

The opportunity is also expanding beyond infrastructure into companies adopting AI to improve productivity, customer experiences, and business operations. Applications range from software development and digital marketplaces to more sophisticated automation and transaction processing. Other structural trends include electrification and power-grid modernization, which could support a multiyear capital investment cycle. Increased defense spending in Europe and Asia is also helping to create demand for specialized industrial and technology companies. Energy infrastructure is another area of interest, particularly as global demand for reliable energy supplies supports investment in North American pipelines and liquefied natural gas export facilities.

These trends are helping broaden earnings opportunities beyond the largest U.S. technology companies. They also provide support for international markets, where stronger structural growth drivers may contribute to a more sustained earnings cycle.

Summing Up

Higher interest rates have pressured equity valuations, but resilient economic growth and strong corporate earnings continue to support global equity markets. Historical evidence also shows that rising Treasury yields have not consistently prevented positive equity returns.

The impact of higher rates varies across sectors and business models, while structural investment trends are helping to create opportunities across global markets. For long-term investors, the focus should remain on seeking companies with sustainable competitive advantages, pricing power, and the ability to generate attractive returns on capital. A disciplined, bottom-up approach can help capture those opportunities without relying on predictions about the direction of interest rates.

Glossary & Index Definitions

Basis point (bp) is one one-hundredth of a percentage point (0.01%). Basis points are commonly used to describe changes in interest rates, bond yields, and other financial measures.

Bottom-up investing is an investment approach focused on analyzing individual companies, including their financial strength, competitive positioning, earnings potential, and valuation, rather than primarily relying on broad economic or market forecasts.

Capital expenditures (CapEx) are funds invested by a company to acquire, build, upgrade, or maintain long-term assets such as facilities, equipment, technology, and infrastructure.

Competitive advantage refers to a company's ability to outperform competitors through characteristics such as pricing power, economies of scale, differentiated products, or network effects. Sustainable competitive advantages can help protect profitability and support long-term earnings growth.

Earnings growth is the increase in a company's profits over a specified period, typically expressed as a percentage.

Earnings yield measures a company's or stock index's earnings relative to its market price, expressed as a percentage. It is calculated by dividing earnings per share by the stock price and is the inverse of the price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio. A higher earnings yield generally indicates a lower valuation relative to earnings.

Electrification refers to the increasing use of electricity to power activities, equipment, and infrastructure that previously relied on other energy sources, contributing to investment in power generation, transmission, and electrical systems.

Liquefied natural gas (LNG) is natural gas that has been cooled to a liquid state for storage and transportation, allowing it to be shipped to markets that are not connected by pipelines.

Nominal gross domestic product (GDP) growth measures the increase in the total value of goods and services produced by an economy, including the effects of inflation.

Price-to-earnings (P/E) ratio is a valuation measure calculated by dividing a company's stock price by its earnings per share. A higher P/E ratio generally indicates that investors are paying more for each dollar of earnings.

Real estate investment trusts (REITs) are companies that own, operate, or finance income-producing real estate. Their valuations and financing costs can be sensitive to changes in interest rates.

Return on invested capital (ROIC) is a financial measure that evaluates how efficiently a company generates operating profits from the capital invested in its business.

Secular growth trends are long-term economic, technological, or demographic developments that can drive business growth over multiple years, independent of shorter-term economic cycles.

Sustainable competitive advantage is a company's ability to maintain a favorable competitive position over time through structural strengths that are difficult for competitors to replicate.

Valuation multiple is a measure used to assess the price of a company or security relative to a financial metric, such as earnings, revenue, or cash flow. Multiple compression occurs when investors pay a lower price relative to that metric.

10-year U.S. Treasury yield is the yield on U.S. government debt securities with approximately 10 years to maturity. It is widely used as a benchmark for long-term interest rates and borrowing costs.

S&P 500 Index is a market-capitalization-weighted index of 500 leading publicly traded U.S. companies and is widely used as a benchmark for large-cap U.S. equity market performance.

MSCI World Index is a global stock market index that tracks large- and mid-cap equity performance across 23 developed markets. The index covers approximately 85% of the free float-adjusted market capitalization in each country.

Bloomberg Index Information
Source: Bloomberg Index Services Limited. BLOOMBERG® is a trademark and service mark of Bloomberg Finance L.P. and its affiliates (collectively "Bloomberg"). Bloomberg owns all proprietary rights in the Bloomberg Indices. Bloomberg does not approve or endorse this material or guarantee the accuracy or completeness of any information herein, or make any warranty, express or implied, as to the results to be obtained therefrom and, to the maximum extent allowed by law, shall not have any liability or responsibility for injury or damages arising in connection therewith.

Morningstar Information:
Morningstar, Inc. © 2026. All rights reserved. The information contained herein is the proprietary information of Morningstar, Inc., may not be copied or redistributed for any purpose and may only be used for non-commercial, personal purposes. The information contained herein is not represented or warranted to be accurate, correct, complete or timely. Morningstar, Inc., shall not be responsible for investment decisions, damages, or other losses resulting from the use of this information. Past performance is no guarantee of future performance. Morningstar, Inc. has not granted consent for it to be considered or deemed an "expert" under the Securities Act of 1933.

Indexes are unmanaged, do not reflect the deduction of fees or expenses, and are not available for direct investment.

Important Information

The information contained herein is provided by Lord, Abbett & Co. LLC ("Lord Abbett"). Lord Abbett is a registered investment adviser under the U.S. Investment Advisers Act of 1940 (the "Advisers Act"), as amended, and is subject to the Advisers Act rules and regulations adopted by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission ("SEC"). Registration with the SEC does not imply a particular ability or training. Lord Abbett is a global asset manager with headquarters in Jersey City, New Jersey.

Certain information provided in the material has been obtained from third party sources and such information has not been independently verified by Lord Abbett. No representation, warranty, or undertaking, expressed or implied, is given to the accuracy or completeness of such information by Lord Abbett or any other person. While such sources are believed to be reliable, Lord Abbett does not assume any responsibility for the accuracy or completeness of such information. Lord Abbett does not undertake any obligation to update the information contained herein as of any future date.

Certain information contained in the material constitutes "forward-looking statements," which can be identified by the use of forward-looking terminology such as "may," "will," "should," "expect," "anticipate," "project," "estimate," "intend," "continue," or "believe," or the negatives thereof or other variations thereon or comparable terminology. Due to various risks and uncertainties, actual events, results or actual performance may differ materially from those reflected or contemplated in such forward-looking statements. Nothing contained in the material may be relied upon as a guarantee, promise, assurance or a representation as to the future.

Market forecasts and projections are based on current market conditions and are subject to change without notice. Projections should not be considered a guarantee.

Past performance is not a reliable indicator or guarantee of future results. All investments involve risk, including the loss of capital.

The views and opinions expressed are those of the Lord Abbett author as of the date of the material, and do not necessarily represent the views of the firm as a whole. Any such views are subject to change at any time based upon market or other conditions and Lord Abbett disclaims any responsibility to update such views. References to specific asset classes and financial markets are for illustrative purposes only. This material is not intended to be relied upon as a forecast, research or investment advice. Neither Lord Abbett nor the Lord Abbett author can be responsible for any direct or incidental loss incurred by applying any of the information offered.

The information in this material does not constitute a distribution, an offer, an invitation, a personal or general recommendation or solicitation in any jurisdiction. This material has not been reviewed or approved by any regulatory authority in any jurisdiction.

None of the information provided should be regarded as a suggestion to engage in or refrain from any investment-related course of action as neither Lord Abbett nor its affiliates are undertaking to provide impartial investment advice, act as an impartial adviser, or give advice in a fiduciary capacity.

Mentions of specific companies are for reference purposes only and are not meant to describe the investment merits of, or potential or actual portfolio changes related to, securities of those companies.

Unless otherwise noted, all discussions are based on U.S. markets and U.S. monetary and fiscal policies.

This material may not be reproduced in whole or in part or any form without the permission of Lord Abbett.

Copyright © 2026 by Lord, Abbett & Co. LLC. All rights reserved.

Lord, Abbett & Co. LLC | 30 Hudson Street, Jersey City, NJ 07302-4804 | T 1.888.522.2388 | LordAbbett.com
Copyright © 2026 by Lord, Abbett & Co. LLC/Lord Abbett Distributor LLC. All rights reserved.

IP-RATEVOLEQUITY-US
10-26