How did the Fund perform last year and what affected its performance?

For the fiscal year ended November 30, 2024, the Fund returned 33.24%, reflecting performance at the net asset value (NAV) of Class A shares, with all distributions reinvested, compared to its benchmark and broad-based securities market index, S&P 500 Index, which returned 33.89% over the same period.

Positive factors for the markets included momentum around the soft-landing narrative, which was supported by signs of a cooling labor market and a slowing economy. This led to the U.S. Federal Reserve lowering its policy rate by 50 basis points in September and an additional 25 basis points in November. There were also increased expectations in the market for further rate cuts in 2024. Mixed economic data, including softer consumer price index reports and fluctuating job market indicators, contributed to these rate cut expectations, and also sparked recession fears. However, these factors were mostly balanced by strong consumer spending and retail sales.

Top contributors to performance: Security selection within the Consumer Staples sector contributed to relative performance, led by an overweight allocation to Walmart Inc. Security selection within the Information Technology sector also contributed to relative performance, led by an overweight allocation to Nvidia Corporation.

Top detractors from performance: Security selection within the Consumer Discretionary sector detracted from relative performance, led by an overweight allocation to McDonald's Corporation. Security selection within the Communication Services sector also detracted from relative performance, led by an overweight allocation to Comcast Corporation.
