

Kristen Maple

Partner, Chief Culture Officer

Kristen Maple is the Chief Culture Officer of Lord Abbett. She is responsible for empowering the firm's principles-led, performance-oriented, purpose-driven culture as a competitive advantage. In this role, Kristen oversees the teams responsible on delivering an employee experience that attracts, retains, and inspires top talent, while promoting enterprise sustainability.

Throughout her career at the firm, Kristen has she served in a variety of senior leadership roles, including Chief Impact Officer; Chief Administrative Officer for the firm and, prior to that, for Client Service. Previously, she oversaw teams in Marketing and Institutional Investor Services. Earlier in her career, Ms. Maple worked in the finance division at JPMorgan Chase & Co. and in the defined contribution recordkeeping department at Deutsche Bank. She has worked in the financial services industry since 1995.

Kristen earned a BS in business administration from the University of Delaware. She serves on the board of directors of the Susan G. Komen, the world's leading no-profit in the fight against breast cancer. In addition, Kristen is a member of the Women's Forum of New York and the G100 Women's Network. She lives in Chatham, New Jersey, with her husband and two children.